

Alliance Against Cybercrime

Leandra Ramm, a renowned singer and performer, was the victim of an eight year ordeal by a vicious cyberstalker from Singapore. The offender, a Mr. Coli Mak, was a convicted arms dealer who became obsessed with Ms. Ramm, He sent her countless emails threatening her and her family with graphic disgusting death threats from 2005 through 2013. With the untiring efforts of Mr. A.J. Fardella,, a digital forensics examiner and cybercrime expert, evidence identifying Mak as the perpetrator was secured. However, getting the authorities to do something was equally, if not more difficult, than solving the case. Ultimately, with the assistance of CII members Galen Clements, Sheila Ponnosamy, Ponno Kalastree, and Sant Jayagram, the authorities in Singapore were able to successfully prosecute Mak. In December 2013 he was sentenced to three years in prison. Ms. Ramm’s nightmarish experiences motivated her, Mr. Fardella, and others to form the Alliance Against Cybercrime. The goal is to provide education, application, research and advocacy for victims of this crime. The ACC is currently focusing on the “Ramm Initiative” to reform international treaties to address cyber harassment and strengthen existing provisions. Towards this goal, CII has formed an informal strategic alliance with the ACC.. The Conference Committee is pleased to have members of the Alliance Against Cybercrime present at our Awards Luncheon to tell us more about Ms. Ramm’s journey from hell and back and more importantly, her courage in the face of adversity. They will also explain their mission and how we can work together to combat this terrible crime.

About the AAC

The Alliance Against Cybercrime (AAC) is a 501© (3) non profit organization registered in California, USA. The AAC was created to fight cybercrime through action, research, education and vigilance. The AAC is an interdisciplinary group of professionals working to provide training, applications, resources, and advocacy for victims of cybercrime and professionals combatting cybercrime.

More about the Alliance Against Cybercrime can be found at their web site www.victimsnomore.org or by reading Ms. Ramm’s just published book, “Stalking A Diva”.

To Whom It May Concern:

This letter is to acknowledge that Mainguard International was influential and important in my case against Colin Mak Yew Loong. Mainguard International provided me with a detailed private investigations report on Colin Mak Yew Loong. Mainguard International connected me with Galen Clements, an influential investigator in the USA, who provided me with specific background information of the perpetrator and whom I am still in contact with to this day. Mainguard, along with Mr. Clements, are supporting my non-profit organization, The Alliance Against Cybercrime. Mainguard International also conducted a thorough analysis of the email evidence, which traced the emails to Singapore and eventually to the perpetrator. The initial investigations that Mainguard provided were the building blocks that then allowed the case to be examined on a digital forensics level. The teamwork that was involved in this case is important to note; Ponno Kalastree, Sheila Ponnosamy, and Sant Kaur Jayaram of Mainguard International tirelessly worked on this case.

Thank you,

Leandra Ramm
