

Leandra Ramm sings like a Dream Angel

'A truly remarkable voice singing a totally unforgettable song'

Introducing American singer Leandra Ramm, a truly remarkable voice singing a totally unforgettable song.

Dream Angel is Leandra's first single, combining pop and classical music to create a unique vocal style.

Think Katherine Jenkins crossed with Celine Dion and you may be some way towards defining Leandra's amazing voice.

Born and raised in New York City, Leandra, 25, is opera-trained and performs in opera, concerts and musicals on some of the world's great stages. Now she's combined pop ballad and classical styles for her first foray into recorded music.

If there's something slightly familiar about Dream Angel, it's because it's based on Bach's haunting Prelude in C Major. It's not the first time a singer has 'borrowed' from the classics. Barry Manilow did it using a Chopin prelude as the basis for Could It Be Magic. Despite its 18th century origins, Dream Angel sounds modern, fresh and new.

'I love the idea of crossover music,' says Leandra, 'as it sums up my passion of all types of music. It's very satisfying to combine something that has stood the test of time but give it a totally new dimension.'

'I love writing songs and combining different styles as I think it appeals to such a wide audience. I'm very excited to be releasing my first single.'

Dream Angel is now available for download from Amazon and all the usual online music shops.
